

Starting a fire with ice

Suppose you have been stranded in the Arctic with no signs of help. You realize that the immediate threat to your survival is the cold. Fortunately, you have been left with some kindling and a block of ice. Can you devise a way to start a fire using only the ice and water? And will it really work?

